FAQ

How can I support my baby's head?

Use the hood when your baby sleeps or when your baby does not have good head control: Connect the snaps on the hood with the snaps on the shoulder straps.

I can not tighten the fabric enough – the fabric is too loose around my baby

Before adjusting the fabric fasten all straps tightly: On the front and on the back end of the shoulder straps and the connection strap.

The fabric does not reach to my baby's knees

Make sure that you did not miss any of these points:

1. Put the fabric near the waist belt temporarily between you and the waist belt if your baby is older than 5 months (this fabric comes up to the knees automatically when you go through the shoulder straps).

2. Let your baby slide deep into the carrier.

3. Pull on the lower edge of the fabric and fasten tightly.

4. Wear the waist belt higher near your chest.

The rings are touching my baby's legs

Loosen the fabric and tighten the shoulder straps more instead and adjust the fabric again.

The fabric becomes loose a bit

Make sure that the fabric is not twisted at the rings.

important tips!

fabric

If your Baby is older than 5 month put the fabric temporarily for the adjustment between you and the waist belt.

After you took up your baby and went with your arms through the shoulder straps this part of the fabric comes automatically up to the baby's knees and forms a pouch which holds the knees in the correct position (a bit higher than baby's bottom). By tightening the lowest edge of the fabric you fix this position. The baby sits in the emeiba-by carrier like this:

waist belt

With toddlers wear the waist belt on your waist, with smaller babies near your chest. This regulates the height of the back panel and helps the fabric form a pouch.

connection strap

If you are petite move the connection strap between the two shoulder straps down and tighten the strap as far as it will go.

If your baby is older than 12 months...

...you can close the bands on the waist belt and on the back panel.

narrow the fabric

With small babies narrow the fabric near the waist belt with a separate band if needed.

last but not least

Adjust as necessary and knot the bands near baby's neck to support baby's neck gently.
